SUGAR GOES UP BUT SUBSEQUENT FALL EXPECTED

Sugar took an increase in Utah today, an additional $1 per hundred pounds being added to the price, according to officials of the Amalgamated Sugar company. The advance was made last night in the east from $10.50 to $11.50 per hundred pounds, seaboard basis.

In Ogden sugar was retailing at 15.35 per hundred pounds while some of the stores in the downtown district were retailing sugar by the pound in small lots at 16 cents per pound.

The present weather conditions are hampering beet topping in all sections of the state, according to officials of the Amalgamated Sugar company, but it is stated that the factories of northern Utah and Idaho have ample beets to keep running until there is a change in the weather conditions.

Although the increase today has given many the opinion that sugar is again on an upward trend, officials of local retail stores expressed the opinion that another drop would undoubtedly take place during the coming week.

Through Dr. Heber J. Sears, head of the department of hygiene and preventive medicine at the University of Utah, who visited Ogden yesterday, the university has offered to the service of the people of this section a strong force of competent physicians who will lecture at the request of any club, church, school or any other organization on subjects pertaining to correct living.

Among other things there will be conducted a rural sanitation survey, the object being to ascertain what kind of health education each particular community is in need of. This survey will be conducted through the public schools by the department of hygiene and health, now being formed in every school district. It will be made a very interesting part of the school work. The lecturers will be assisted by the cooperative of the parents and citizens of the state in the matter.

The University of Utah desires to render every possible service to the people of the state and urges them to take advantage of this service offered.

Government Urges Use of Dairy Stuffs

Cooperating with the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture, the United States to use more dairy products as a means of cutting down the high cost of living and affording better nourishment to growing school children, John Felt, city milk inspector, has begun the work here with the free distribution of a booklet, "Delicious products of the dairy."

The booklet explains the value of sweet clean milk and other dairy products as a food and compares them with other more expensive foods. It says about the use of milk: It gives vitality to youth, power to middle life, and to old age it brings a goodly portion of the health and vigor of former years. It should be used more largely by people of all ages, classes and conditions. Milk steadies the nerves and adds to the physical strength, and mental energy of those who use it.

The booklet contains a valuable table which compares the building materials of milk with other foods and compares the prices of these foods with dairy products.

Men, women and children are invited to take these booklets home, which the government wants placed in every American home. Children may obtain them by a visit to Mr. Felt's office in the city hall.

CHURCH VIEWS ON LEAGUE, TOPIC

Welling Stirs Up Excitement in Speech at Democratic Headquarters

Efforts of the Republican campaign managers to prove that the Mormon church has changed its attitude with regard to its endorsement of the covenant when members of the Republican party explained last night that a statement credited to Thomas E. McKay was made instead by Arthur Woolley, Republican campaign manager.

The assertion came in connection with the statement by Congressman Milton H. Welling, Democratic candidate for senator at a meeting in Democratic headquarters that the Mormon church, through its first presidency, placed itself on record as recently as December 20, 1919, an unequivocal in favor of the league and that there has been no evidence of a change through revelation or otherwise since that time.

MESSAGE IS READ.
In support of his assertion Congressman Welling read three paragraphs of the annual message of the first presidency as printed in the Christmas edition of the Deseret News, together with a portion of an editorial appearing in the same issue of the Mormon church newspaper. The purported statement of Mr. McKay was printed Wednesday night in connection with the report of a Republican meeting held at Weber academy on Tuesday evening.

Virtually as many Republicans as Democrats, including four local candidates on the Republican ticket, attended the meeting in Democratic headquarters last night and heard the statement by members of their own party that Chairman Woolley, rather than Mr. McKay, had insinuated the change of attitude on the part of the Mormon church authorities. This is the printed statement reported as having been made by Mr. McKay.

"You who are of the Mormon church know there is belief in continuing revelations and before our Democratic brethren attempt again to quote doctrine, I suggest that they get up-to-date in their scriptures."

In his attempt to disprove that the church authorities have declared for the league of nations Senator Reed Smoot was charged by Congressman Welling with presenting only a part of the first presidency's statement on the subject. What he purported to be the full statement of the church attitude on the covenant as printed over the signatures of the first presidency, Congressman Welling read from the Christmas issue of the Deseret News:

PRESIDENCY QUOTED.
"God send you a merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. That is an old-time, old-world salutation that expresses our present wish for all good people throughout the world and especially to the Latter-day Saints, whom we congratulate on their favorable condition and excellent prospects."

"The cessation of war and the general desire for permanent peace bring a benign influence suited to the season. Let us have peace sounds in harmony with Christmas bells and Christmas cards. The approaching unity of nations, which must come in spite of threatening obstacles, animates the vast majority of mankind and presages the fraternalization of whilom contending powers and the substitution of friendly arbitration for the settlement of international quarrels in place of armed conflict and detestable bloodshed."

"The efforts in motion towards the ushering in of a new era of amity and good will are steps leading to the establishment of that glorious world-wide government which prophets and poets, sages and seers have predicted from time immemorial. Selfishness—the bane of mankind—is showing up in hideous opposition to the altruism of deified humanity, and the contrast is seen and felt by the thoughtful everywhere. Arrogant egotism is not in harmony with the spirit of the times, especially during the festive proclamation, 'peace on earth, good will to men,' and mutual aid to unified nations."

In reading the paragraph referred to, Congressman Welling explained to his audience that this is the only portion of the first presidency's message that has so far been quoted by Senator Smoot in his campaign speeches. The paragraphs quoted above immediately precede this one in the printed page of the Christmas News.

FINAL PARAGRAPH.
"In promoting the benefit of others, self preservation ought to be paramount. This applies to nations as well as individuals. Therefore, in extending to foreign governments similar liberties to those enjoyed under our heavenly inspired constitution, care must be taken that the powers, executed and the rights secured to us by the 'supreme law of the land' are not invaded or abridged or weakened in any degree. We should not forfeit a single national prerogative or principle in endeavoring to break down rampant militarism and overthrow tyrannical anarchy. Let us have peace, but not at the price of our country's freedom."

It was just prior to Congressman Welling's reference to the paragraphs printed above that he was challenged by two or more Republicans in the audience as to the correctness of the article in which Mr. McKay was quoted. "That statement was never made by Mr. McKay," declared the speaker's informant, "but was made by Mr. Woolley at the Tuesday evening meeting in introducing Mr. McKay."

Congressman Welling immediately replied that he would not charge the question to the Republican candidate and would be perfectly willing to pass the credit along to Mr. Woolley, the Republican chairman, or whoever else might be willing to assume responsibility. He continued by reading a portion of an editorial also printed in the Christmas issue of the Deseret News:

"Understanding is the one way to universal good will; and to the gaining of this understanding, long strides have been accomplished in the past two years—perhaps, since the armistice, and particularly since the widespread discussion of the peace treaty and the covenant of the league of nations. Americans have come to understand that there is a mutuality of interest linking them with old world peoples; they have come to understand, too, that there is no such thing as isolation; they have come to understand that no nation can delude itself into thinking itself independent of other peoples. It is a good thing for nations to depend upon one another, to be interested in the progress and development of other peoples than themselves. With this new knowledge we have gained of the world—and it is doubtless true that other nations have similarly enriched themselves—there is a new and potential force come into being that cannot but work for an era of international good will, a force promotive of world peace."

ROARS OF LAUGHTER.
Although the meeting for Congressman Welling was arranged on short notice yesterday afternoon more than 200 persons crowded into the Democratic headquarters to hear the Democratic senatorial candidate. In addition to his reference to the league of nations issue, Congressman Welling took up individually and in detail each of the "sixteen points" published by the Republican campaign organization as reasons why one should vote for Senator Smoot.

Congressman Welling's reference to the seventh reason, characterizing the senior senator as watchdog of the treasury, brought applause and roars of laughter when he depicted Senator Smoot as watchdog for the DuPont Powder company and other big interests. The congressman also severely attacked the senator's record in congress as set forth in the "sixteen point" literature.

A. F. Parker Writes on East Canyon Creek Dam
Paper No. 1431 of Transactions of the American Society of Civil Engineers contains a technical article, "The East Canyon Creek Dam," by A. F. Parker, Ogden, engineer. There are also discussions by Edward Godfrey, Samuel Fortier, A. J. Wiley, Herbert E. Bellamy and Mr. Parker.

The article says: "The reservoir formed by the dam stores water for late irrigation of lands in the Salt Lake valley, south of Ogden, and forms a part of the irrigation system owned by the Davis and Weber Counties Canal company of Ogden. The structure is of interest because of its slight appearance and the successful manner in which it stands the test of use."
